SACRIFICES DO NOT END ON THE BATTLEFIELD
Hardison & Associates Introduces: Operation Helping Hand

Raleigh, NC – Unfortunately for many veterans of the Iraq and Afghanistan Wars, the sacrifices made on the battlefield often carry over well past their tour of duty. As the recent Walter Reed health care scandal illustrates, the combination of bureaucracy, red tape and lack of preparedness has had a devastating impact on the recovery and psyche of injured US soldiers. Many come home to face a bigger battle just to receive the medical attention and care they deserve.

“Our team of lawyers all feel very strongly about doing what we can. We are offering our legal services for free to help veterans of the Iraq and Afghanistan Wars get disability benefits,” says Ken Hardison, managing partner of Hardison & Associates. Hardison adds, “we want to get the word out to those military personnel who may have a need, but not know where to turn. We challenge other law firms in the area to join Operation Helping Hand.”

Past or present military personnel may contact Hardison & Associates toll free at 800-LawyerNC to talk to a lawyer about their situation. Or visit LawyerNC.com for more information. Pro-bono cases will be taken for a limited time.
